リチウムイオン電池

Fires caused by lithium-ion batteries are increasing !

Impacts such as dropping or crushing a lithium-ion battery can cause an internal short circuit, leading to smoke and fire. Do not mix lithium-ion batteries with other waste. Lithium-ion batteries, when crushed in garbage trucks or impact by shredders at waste processing facilities, can ignite and cause large-scale fires.

Japanese for receiving packages and letters

Important letters and packages might be delivered while you are away.

fu za i hyou

不在票 A delivery notice

This is a piece of paper that lets you know that a package or important letter has arrived while you're not at home. The delivery person will put it in your mailbox. The notice tells you how to arrange for a second delivery.

sai hai tatsu

再配達 Redelivery

This means having a package or letter that you were unable to receive delivered again.

A package was delivered while you were out, and you found the notice in your mailbox. You will arrange a new delivery time and date using the phone, web, or app. From the day the notice is delivered to your mailbox, there is a set storage period for each item, such as 7 days for regular parcels and letters, and 3 days for temperature-controlled delivery services (refrigerated delivery, frozen delivery, cold delivery). If the storage period expires, the package will be returned to the sender. Please contact us as soon as possible.

置き配 Contactless delivery

This means that the package you receive will be left at a designated location. When you are not at home, your luggage will be left at a designated location. You can specify various locations for contactless delivery, such as a delivery locker, a garage, or in front of the entrance.

コンビニ受け取り convenience store pickup

Package pick-up service at convenience stores.

You'll have your package delivered to a designated convenience store instead of your home, and you'll go pick it up yourself. You can pick up your package anytime the convenience store is open. Not all convenience stores offer this service, so please check.
